

Dynamic Networking for Small Business: “DyNet–Erie”

What is DyNet-Erie?

DyNet-Erie is a government contracting conference held in Erie, Pennsylvania. The event features representatives from federal & state agencies, government prime contractors and business resource exhibitors as well as several breakout training workshops. DyNet-Erie makes a host of resources available to small businesses and provides networking opportunities to match capabilities with multiple government agencies and prime contractors, all in one day at one convenient location.

Small Business attendees are encouraged to maximize their time networking as well as take advantage of the learning opportunities offered. PLUS, organizations that support small businesses in the federal market will also be on hand to share their expertise.

DYNET-ERIE IS FREE TO ATTEND.

How does it work?

DyNet-Erie provides a networking area with exhibitor tables. These exhibitors will be representatives from one of three groups: Federal, State or Local Agencies/Offices; Government Prime Contractors; Area Business Resources.

Attendees should come prepared to speak about their company's capabilities/products/services with gov agencies & gov prime contractors. (And don't forget about networking with the other small business attendees, as this may lead to business opportunities as well!) Reps from area business resource offices will also have tables where attendees can get answers to questions and learn about the programs available in our region.

In addition to the networking area, there will be break-out sessions held during the day. These sessions will cover different aspects of government contracting & doing business with gov agencies. Networking runs concurrently with training workshops.

Attendees can manage their own schedule, mixing training opportunities with networking. You may come and go as your schedule permits. The agenda and training schedule will be furnished to the registrants once finalized.

Morning refreshments and lunch will be provided.
